[00:00:00.36] Balancing priorities for me is somewhat of a challenge. There's family. There's school, work, all of the above.

[00:00:12.99] So I do have to set priorities. Of course, family's first. And then I allot time as needed for my other obligations. So if I allot time for family, allot time for school, and allot time for work, I find that I can balance my schedule more.

[00:00:27.80] The one challenge was originally with my schedule, trying to tweak it and make sure it works. So I tried to schedule my classes for daytime hours, when my kids are at school, husband's at work. Not interfering with anyone allots me time for class and studying and things of that nature.

[00:00:45.32] I know I'm a procrastinator. And procrastination is probably though one of the biggest flaws that any student can have. Wait until the last minute to do anything is not good.

[00:00:56.08] One of the strategies that I use with my procrastination is to do lists. I write down everything I need to do from the week from Monday through Sunday. And the to do list help me be organized.

[00:01:07.05] And organization is key part of college. Without organization, it's like you're lost. So it helps with my procrastination. I'm getting better and better each semester.
