

WHERE TO GO FOR HELP

AT YOUR COLLEGE

VISIT . . .

College Catalog

Student Activities

Library

IF YOU NEED HELP . . .

taking argument courses and critical thinking courses. Such courses will help you develop the ability to form logical arguments and avoid logical fallacies.

joining a debate club or team.

finding resources for improving your critical thinking skills. For example, 12 Angry Men by Reginald Rose (New York: Penguin Classics, 2006) is a reprint of the original teleplay, which was written in 1954 and made into a film in 1958. It is also available on DVD. The stirring courtroom drama pits twelve jurors against one another as they argue the outcome of a murder trial in which the defendant is a teenage boy. While critical thinking is needed to arrive at the truth, all the jurors except one use noncritical arguments to arrive at a guilty verdict. However, the analysis of that one holdout produces a remarkable change in their attitudes.

ONLINE

GO TO . . .

Florida International University on Bloom's Taxonomy:
http://online.fiu.edu/faculty/resources/blooms taxonomy

ICYouSee Guide to Critical Thinking:
<http://.icyousee.org/think/think.html>

IF YOU NEED HELP . . .

understanding and using Bloom's taxonomy to build an awareness of how you progress through the levels in building your critical thinking skills.

finding a guide to critical thinking about what you see on the Web.

MY COLLEGE'S RESOURCES
