

WOMAN:

So even if there is no strong, conclusive evidence that dreams have an impact on a reality and or our daily life, most of the researchers I have consulted suggested there is a correlation. It's simply tough to study dreaming because researchers must rely on indirect data. For example, electrical activity, or the self reports of dreamers.